CANADIAN LEGION GIVE WHIST DRIVE

TUBERCULAR VETERAN ASSOC. PROFIT NICELY FROM SOCIAL EVENING

On Tuesday evening last, a very enjoyable whist drive and musical program was held in the Masonic hall by the Wainwright branch of the Canadian Legion, B.I.S.L., in aid of the Tubercular Veterans Association.

The local Veterans have long held the name of putting on a high-class social entertainment which at the same time is very good value for one's money, and Tuesday's affair was no exception to this rule.

Under the direction of Mr. G. L. Hudson thirty tables completed for the whist honors with the following results:—Ladies: Mrs. J. Whittle, 1; Mrs. I. Smart, 2; consolation, Miss C. Horne, Gentlemen: Mr. D. Dundas, 1; Mr. W. H. Edwards, 2; consolation, Mr. J. W. Wood.

Under the Chairmanship of Mr. A. S. MacLellan the programme that followed was a gem of its kind and enjoyed by all. Mrs. Gunderson and Mrs. Greer together with Messrs F. Stott and H. Ward gave an orchestral number delightful to listen to. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Clark, saxophone and piano, were charming together. Mr. W. H. Edwards' fine voice accompanied by Mrs. Edwards at the piano, held its audience as it held another audience of war-weary and disillusioned men in the riotous camp at Rhyl (Wales) ten years ago that same night.

The Rev. N. W. Whitmore is a few well-chosen words brought home to the gathering the need of help for the tubercular veterans many of whom, from the very nature of their malady cannot prove that their disability is the result of military service, and thus are not drawing pension.

Mr. Frank Morris and Mr. H. H. Pilgrim were very easy to listen to in a couple of excellently-rendered recitations.

"Ration Party on the double" was the next order and again the Veterans proved their ability to do a thing quickly, well and without fuss, and after a delectable lunch the evening was brought to a close by the singing of "God save the King".

As a result of this pleasant evening the Wainwright branch of the Legion are in a position to make a most little contribution to the Tubercular Veterans Association and wish to thank everyone for their support and sympathy for so worthy a cause.

Charley Anderson of Pasmehdale is away on a visit to his aunt in Edmonton for a short while.

Messrs Carl Stafford and Dick McKay drive over to Hardisty last week to make arrangements for the building of the big new garage which the former will need there for the handling of the General Motors cars and trucks.

FABYAN PETE TO START CLEANING MYSTERY WELL

Mr. Roy E. Williams, the president and managing director of the Fabyan Petroleum Co., who has been spending the winter at the coast in preparation for a big programme for his company this season, has now returned here and is busy getting ready to open up again the big Imperial well at Fabyan which has been known as the mystery well. This well was shut down when in proven production, and it is Mr. Williams' intention to get this hole into shape at once. The gas at this well which was one of the features of the venture will be supplied to the other wells in the vicinity and also used as fuel for the cleaning out of the Fabyan Pete No. 1 well and the drilling of the company's next well as slated to be commenced forthwith in the same vicinity.

Mr. Williams is confident that the No. 1 well will be brought into production in a very short time, and if found necessary the hole will be deepened.

Regarding the No. 2 hole under stand that a contract has already been let for the actual drilling of this well; and the company itself will erect the derrick. A third well is also on the tapis and this will not be far from the other well sites.

According to Mr. Williams the company is fully financed now for this year's operations, and the drilling of the other wells will be on a royalty basis.

It is worthy of note that this company now controls some 15,000 acres in the neighborhood of 15,000 acres of oil lands in this district, and is determined to keep going to the limit to obtain the "liquid gold" to benefit their shareholders.

Miss B. McKay has returned from her visit spent with her cousin Mr. and Mrs. Moon of Orindale district.

OIL REFINERIES ARE BUSY IN FEBRUARY

Increased oil production in the Turner Valley field is indicated by the accounts of receipts and credits forwarded to the Imperial Oil Refineries and the Regal Refinery in Calgary during the month of February. The former received 25,428 barrels of crude naphtha and 12,742 barrels of crude oil while 6,318 barrels were delivered to the latter plant. This volume represents an increase of nearly 3,000 barrels over the deliveries during the previous month.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE COMMITTEE REPORT

ACCOMMODATION FOR VISITORS TO TOWN SHOWN TO BE AVAILABLE

The regular monthly meeting of the W.I. met at the home of Mrs. J. Welch when 34 members answered to the roll-call.

After the usual order of business an interesting programme was given by the members and a nice lunch was served, with suggestions of the "Siventh of Oreland" in the decorative scheme.

A report from the committee of the W.I. who had been deputed to petition the Town Council re lavatory accommodation in town for those from the farms was dealt with and the letters on the matter from the Town Secretary showed that the proprietors of both hotels had stated in an interview that "they are both willing at all times to allow access to those who wish to use them; the upstairs lavatories and sitting rooms, as that part of the understanding with the Council when the rate was set for the employing of the cesspools. The hotel proprietors also wish to make it known that the sign "For Guests Only" does not apply in this case, as it is placed only for a specific reason.

The committee were heartily thanked for their efforts in this matter.

PROVINCES ARE NOT ENTHUSIASTIC OVER INSURANCE SCHEMES

OTTAWA — Eight of Canada's provinces have replied to requests from the minister of labor to express their attitude toward insurance against unemployment, sickness and invalidity. With the exception of Prince Edward Island, Hon. J. C. Bennett, minister of labor told the select standing committee of the commons on industrial and international relations yesterday all the provinces have signified their interest in the problem but are not enthusiastic to adopt at present a scheme of insurance as suggested.

BIG GAS FLOW WON'T HINDER DRILL

WAINWELL OIL CO. HAS OFFER FOR PRODUCT FROM NO. 2 WELL

According to advices from Toronto as published last Thursday the directors of Wainwell Oil Limited met in Toronto to receive the report of P. D. Powell, vice president, and general manager who stated that No. 1 well on the advice of government geologists and engineers was deepened to the second sands and he felt confident that success would follow this effort.

A definite offer is now being considered by the board from a leading western concern for the entire gas output of No. 2 well which blew in at over 20,000,000 cubic feet per day. This sets at rest rumors that this gas could not be disposed of commercially and the company anticipates a handsome return from the sale of gas when the contract is completed.

The disposal of the gas will not interfere with the bringing in of oil from the thick sands of the well the core of which showed a heavy saturation of nine feet. It was decided by the board to deepen the well in the same structure as No. 2 and about 600 feet north-west thereof operations to commence immediately.

SASKO-WAIN. NO 1 SHOWING STILL BETTER RESULTS

Things have sure broken out splendidly for the shareholders of the Sasko-Wainwright Co., since they brought in their No. 1 well last week on L.S.D. 1, 10-45-6. And the results of their efforts are truly due to a great deal.

On Saturday last the well was again baled out to the bottom and in addition to the splendid fact that not a sign of water is visible in the hole, the continued flow of the "liquid gold" gave them something over 800 feet of oil in the well on Monday morning.

It is the intention of the directors who are handling things so nicely that the baling shall be continued steadily, and the fact that the oil still comes in so steady and smoothly, and that it is of a better grade and lighter color than formerly secured from other wells proves their action correct.

The one thing the company tried to do was to get a good commercial well, free from water trouble rather than a large flow and this effect, the officials of the Company are satisfied has been accomplished.

The well is being rigged up for pumping while in the meantime baling is continued, and this should increase production. The present indications are that it should be a long life well. The company will dispose of the oil to the Associated Refineries Limited which also have the production from No. 3 B.P. and the Edmonton-Wainwright wells.

The company plans further drilling this summer and with the production of No. 1 well the shareholders should have a real run for their money and be highly repaid for the efforts that have been put forth to obtain the production now attained.

THE CRIME CODE

CHAPTER VII

The Awakening

What could it all mean? I had suddenly awakened to a new world one familiar enough to me before my sudden unconsciousness, but in which two whole years had been blotted out. Of my life or actions during that lost period I had absolutely no recollection. My mind was a perfect blank.

As I stood there I tried to recall; but my last remembrance was that horror when the girl Hatten had taken me fettered and powerless, into that shabby little room in order to render me blind.

Happy I could still see I gazed around the luxurious bedroom, with its rose-pink carpet, curtains and handsome toilet fittings. I walked to the mirror. But when I saw my reflection, I experienced a shock. I was certainly myself but looked fully ten years older than on that night of my sinister adventure in Bloomsbury, when the criminal who was known as Monkey Dick—so called because of his agility in climbing to upper windows—had attacked me and had accidentally shot in our struggle, I walked to the window and stood upon the balcony. The pale pearly dawn was rising over Rome. The great piazza with its palms, its fountains and flowers was deserted and no sound broke the quiet save the splashing of the fountain.

Yes the Eternal City was just the same as I had known it in my youth when with the dear old governor. I had spent nearly a year at the Russell, afterwards paying several visits to the capital again. I took a deep breath of the flower-scented air refreshing after the crowded ballroom

I had left; and then returning into my room, I made a tour of it and with curiosity examined my possessions. They were not many, scarcely anything I recognised.

On my little finger of my left hand was a fine signet ring of lapis lazuli upon it was the crest of the Hippocampus—a dragon's head. I removed it for examination and inside found an inscription in facsimile of the same handwriting as the letter which read from Ilona, 9 B 241.

The third of August 1924! What could it commemorate? My marriage to my unknown wife? Was that possible?—for the date was within my last years.

I replaced it upon my finger in utter bewilderment. Then I turned to the contents of my suit case which I emptied upon the bed.

Amid the miscellaneous collection which always accumulates in the kit of every man who is a constant traveler almost the first thing that met my eyes was a small leather case. On opening it I found in my amazement that it was a drug-baker's outfit! Surely I was not in the habit of taking morphine! I closed the little case and tossed it into the waste-paper basket hoping that in my newly awakened state I should never handle it again. A case containing tie-pins and cufflinks—several sets of diamonds—was the next I opened. Among the pins was one of two square-cut diamonds with an emerald between them, which I knew Joan had given me for my birthday, and a pair of red enamelled links with diamond centres were the ones I had long possessed. But my clothes were all unfamiliar, though they were smart enough and from the tabs had been made by my usual tailor in Conduit Street.

In the pocket in the lid of the suitcase were some letters. These I took out and sitting at the writing table I proceeded to examine them. There were four letters from Madrid, Brussels and Athens, cities which I supposed I had visited in the course of my four years as a King's Foreign Service Messenger. That was no doubt my position; for I had already found my Kaiser-passes which claimed international courtesy, so that my luggage was exempt from customs examination on all the frontiers of Europe. There was too my official badge; the little silver grey round.

As one after the other I opened the letters I became more puzzled. Three were in French couched in cryptic language and dated from an address Toulouse reminding that I should disclose the identity of the person to whose name it is useless to refer and apparently containing veiled threats.

Had the threats any connections with the urgent warning contained in the letter from Ilona my mysterious wife?

I realized that I was powerless to acknowledge receipt of her letter as I had no knowledge of her address in Lausanne or of the name of her club in London. Yet she demanded an urgent response telegraphed to both addresses. She awaited my decision on what point?

Suddenly I saw Joan's familiar handwriting on an envelope addressed to 'Lionel Hipwell Esq. care of His Britannic Majesty's Embassy, Madrid' and taking out the letter I observed that it had been written from Queen's Gate on the fifteenth of March.

When I had obtained my key from the concierge I had seen by the big calendar hanging in his bureau that the date was the twenty-third of April. Hence a little more than a month ago I must have been in Madrid and there received the letter from my adored one.

It was sad and full of reproaches. 'You were in London two whole days after your return from Athens' she wrote. 'Yet you had no time to come and see me or to ring me up. You seem so taken up with your new friends and especially with another woman that you have no time for me nowdays. I saw you with my own eyes dining with her at the Berkeley I watched you both but you did not see me. Next morning I called at Sackville Street but your new man told me you had left again for Madrid half an hour before.'

'Is this treatment fair to me, Lionel? I do not upbraid you if you have transferred your love to this woman from Nowhere and find her more attractive than myself. Probably she is. Anyhow she appeared to be very amusing and witty. But at least tell me the truth. Do not continue to mislead me into the belief that you are still mine I beg of you. A woman's heart may suffer much but there is a breaking strain—and mine is very near it!'

'You wired me instantly on your arrival yet instead you prefer the society of your newly-found charmer. I know that while you are absent we cannot meet and discuss the future. If you wish to break our engagement please tell me so. Do not be afraid. I can stand the shock for I am now insured to your neglect and indifference. I shall know when you return from Madrid, and if you do not come to see me then I shall regard your silence as breaking our engagement, and that I myself shall be free with only the bitter memory of one whom I have loved and still devotedly love.'

Your broken-hearted
JOAN

Twice I re-read the letter and divined in it the poignant suffering of a woman's soul.

What foolish act had I committed? Was I actually wadded to the mysterious Ilona the husband of a woman I could not remember? In my lost existence I had evidently selected certain follies of which I held no recollection. What were they? One—the inexcusable vice of drug-taking—I had established beyond doubt. How many other ill advised and irresponsible acts had I performed? Or how many foolish indiscretions had I been culpable in?

In my perplexity I stood confused, perhaps half dazed. Vainly I sought to disentangle the astounding situation but the more I strove to remember the darker and more inscrutable the past became. The mystery of it all was incomprehensible. For over two years I had evidently been leading a normal life with few suspicions that my brain had become unbalanced or that my memory of the past was a blank. I had resolved on mental reservation from the first moment when the shock of my fall in the Embassy dining room had aroused me to a sense of consciousness of things about me. I dared not make inquiry concerning anything lest my friends should believe me to be mad.

Without doubt the fearful horror of that never-to-be forgotten night at Camberwell was responsible for the incomprehensible state of my mind. Already some unfortunate facts were only too clear I had not replied to Joan's appeal. Hence by my silence our engagement I supposed had been broken. But in what circumstances had I married the mysterious Ilona of whose address I was in ignorance and whom I had never seen? I must have married in secret for Joan had not mentioned it though she had watched me dining with someone at the Berkeley. Could the woman have been my wife?

What excuse could I make to Joan tender memories of whom had arisen within me and whom I loved with all my soul? How could I explain my marriage and my cruel betrayal? The complications were so many that I was frantic with uncertainty and bewilderment. I renewed the search among my papers. There was a letter dated from Sackville Street signed Edward Bruce its servile tone showed it to be from my new man as Joan called him. What was he like. I wondered. I pictured a tall thin grey-haired servant (Continued on Page Seven)

West Has Priceless Heritage

Saskatchewan might be termed the epitome of Canada's Great West. No other Province has a more interesting heritage for the fabric of which that population has been woven. Contains threads of so many racial cultures. Of the eight hundred and seven thousand three-fourths are of British descent with English and Scots blood predominating. One half a million were born in Canada, and of these a small but notable sprinkling are of French-Canadian descent. Ninety-eight thousand were born in the British Isles. Continental Europe has added twenty-two racial strains of which the larger groups may be summarized as follows: (35,000) Scandinavian (29,000), Teutonic (19,000), and German (1,000). The remainder are of various other nationalities. Each of these groups contribute something to the Canadian art and music. Above is seen a Slovak weaver who will remove his pipe and sing to his handiwork.

prevent an inherent love for beautiful things and a love of melody. Folk-song is intimately linked up with handicraft, for it is to the accompaniment of folk-song that the spinning wheel, turp and the beautiful homespun fabrics are woven. These fabrics can never be duplicated by the factory-made article, and the efforts of the Canadian Handicrafts Guild to find and retain a market for the craft-work which can be done during the winter months on the farms of Western Canada is therefore well worthy of support. This Guild is preparing a handicraft exhibit in connection with the Folk-song and Folk-music Festival which the Canadian Pacific is organizing to be held at Regina, March 20-23rd, as the inauguration of a Saskatchewan Branch.

The main idea of this Great West festival is to help Canadians to realize the priceless heritage which they possess in the traditional melodies which have been brought to this country by immigrants, and to some cases have been composed in this country by early settlers. The field of folk-music is so immense that only a glimpse of it can be secured in the four days of this particular festival, but some of the greatest artists of the continent will render interpretations and it promises indeed, to be a feast of music and color. Paul Bai, the Danish baritone will feature in Norse music, Charles Marchand in the French-Canadian folk-songs and almost every nation will be represented in handicraft as in song. Above is seen a Slovak weaver who will remove his pipe and sing to his handiwork.

Time Lord's Day Alliance closing its annual convention in New York City placed before the radio commission an appeal for a censorship by the commission of all Sunday radio programs.

If the Alliance has its way 'cheap loud jazz' will be off the air Sunday and the commission will be mentor of the nation's acoustic and spiritual needs for the day so far as radio is concerned. The Rev. H. W. Bowdler, national secretary of the Alliance today explained the purpose of the organization as follows:

NURSES know, and doctors have declared there's nothing quite like Aspirin to relieve all sorts of aches and pains, but be sure it is Aspirin, the name Bayer should be on the package, and on every tablet. Bayer is genuine, and the word genuine—indeed—is on every box. You can't go wrong if you will just look at the box:

protection all along life's highway. The anxious hours of the expectant mother, the dangerous years of infancy with their high death rate, schooltime with its important problems to radiant boyhood and girlhood, until the period of citizenship and true manhood and womanhood is reached are all considered in formulating the policy of Red Cross.

In each and every age the Peace-time Red Cross has been busy with its program of better health, less suffering, permanent peace and happiness everywhere. Huge sums of money have been spent in Alberta since war days in developing policies which will fit the needs of this young but growing province. To-day the Red Cross can proudly point to the fact that its position is secure and stable in the great health field it has made its own.

Commissioner Adams, in his report called attention to the fact that while greater progress had been made in 1928 than in any other previous year in all the departments of Red Cross, yet the time for congratulation is not yet.

Financially the future of Red Cross will depend on the people themselves as further grants from the Dominion Office have entirely ceased. There is no question however that in the opinion of every thinking person in Alberta the Red Cross has more than justified its experience as one of the greatest humanitarian agencies in Alberta to-day and has never been more needed than at the present time.

It is hoped that Alberta will rise to her opportunities for service under the Red Cross flag and during 1929 will make a supreme effort to raise the $50,000 required for the year's budget.

To the public who subscribe is tendered the gratitude of the Society for the wherewithal to carry on. To the hundreds of Red Cross workers every where, who in their branches and committees undertake the hard work and inevitable drudgery, the sincere thanks of Red Cross are offered.

Never forgetting the first charge of all the soldier who has suffered for his country, and is still disabled, the Red Cross has functioned as a unit at Bechever Hospital, Keith Sanatorium and the University Hospital, Edmonton, bringing cheer and comfort to many a bedside when war's cruel impress may still be seen. By the help of the University Radio C.K. (A.) and by the soldiers themselves the Red Cross Hut has been beautifully renovated, a new floor laid and real comforts obtained in the way of armchairs, etc.

From soldiers to settlers goes the report, and one sees that to the stranger from other lands Red Cross workers everywhere begin at the beginning. There is much faithful following-up, even to the care of the prospective mother in a maternity hospital, this work being done in connection with the Land Settlement Board.

Proudly pointing to the report of the little outpost hospital at Pampa, Coupe, Dr. Harburt, Chairman of the Rural Hospital Board stated that he was entirely satisfied with the efficient conduct of this most remarkable little hospital having spent considerable time there last year when on a health survey.

There had been one thousand more hospital days than last year and double the number of admissions. Pampa Coupe townspeople have taken especial pride in their local Red Cross and are glad to show a most satisfactory financial year in their hospital (To be Continued)

EMPIRE SHOPPING WEEK IS PLANNED

According to word just received from F. Ashcroft, secretary, Alberta branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association empire shopping week in Canada will this year be held from May 25 until June 1 inclusive.

Designed primarily to urge citizens of Canada to buy products manufactured in their own country and when not manufactured here, products from other parts of the British empire the "week" in 1928 elicited the support of all types from the Prince of Wales to the humblest schoolboy. A total of 147 cities, towns and villages, comprising a population of more than 3,000,000 participated in the "week's" activities on a definite organized scale while other municipalities received the literature and retail trade aids.

"Made-in-Canada" shows will be featured in the majority of centres this year while all merchants are expected to provide appropriate window displays.

DOPE PEDDLERS TO BE GIVEN LASHES

OTTAWA—The addition of the lash to penalties for trafficking in drugs was approved this morning by the special committee of the house of commons which is considering amendments to the Opium and Narcotics Drug Act.

Dr. J. P. Howden Liberal St. Boniface chairman of the committee declared that a drug trafficker was worse than a murderer. Dr. Amyot, deputy minister of health said that such a criminal kept his victims in hell on earth for his personal gain.

REVIEWING RED CROSS IN PROV. OF ALBERTA

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Acid cannot be this condition, and it burns the stomach something that will neutralize the acid is the sensible thing to take. That's why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful property can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

CENSORSHIP

OF RADIO

A demand for a federal law to prevent the use of radio in subversion is finding substantial support in the United States. The particular incident which first suggested the need of official censorship of air utterances was the broadcast of a speech by a man named "Taxi 13" in California.
It is felt that the most serious exploitation of the radio should be submitted to the same penalty as if made through press advertisement or in mail matter. As one state could not take action to suppress such activities carried on in another state the question of regulation or suppression becomes a federal affair. Radio waves do not recognize state boundaries.

Another suggestion relating to the radio in the States is that legislative safeguards should be imposed to prevent the broadcast of libelous statements. This is an aftermath of the recent presidential election. The man responsible, it is argued should be attached to statements made over the radio as applies to utterances made from a public platform or in the press.
Divergence of opinion appears to exist as to the feasibility of proving a case against a broadcast slanderer.
Many lawyers hold that it would be necessary to produce witnesses who saw the offender in the act of broadcasting and heard what he said. As this is the very condition he would be most likely to guard against conviction may be obviously difficult. The public as a rule are not invited into broadcasting studios—Ex.

INCOME TAX RETURNS
WANTED BY MAR. 31

INFORMATION SOUGHT BY MIN-ISTER IS HERE CLEARLY EXPLAINED

Once again, Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of National Revenue is using newspaper advertising to assist taxpayers in complying with the requirements of the Dominion Income Tax Act.

In this issue an advertisement appears reminding the public of the law which stipulates that certain information must be in the offices of the Income Tax Inspectors by March 31 next. This information is required from employers, corporations, and trustees or persons acting in a fiduciary capacity. It applies to year ending December 31, 1928.

For instance, employers have to file
a return giving the amounts paid
each person in salaries, bonuses, commissions and fees where the amount was $1,000 or more, or where the salary or wages was at a rate of $1,500 or more. Corporations have to file the names of those who were paid dividends, whether in cash or stock and the amount of each. Persons acting in a fiduciary capacity such as assignees, executors, administrators, receivers, trustees are required to file details of the trust they represent, together with the names of and amounts paid to beneficiaries.

Those mentioned in the act as having to produce this information are being asked to secure the proper forms from the nearest Income Tax Office, fill in their forms according to instructions and mail them to the Income Tax Inspectors at these offices before March 31. These forms are known as T3 for persons acting in a fiduciary capacity T4 for employers and T5 for corporations. Each form contains complete instructions about what the law requires. These information forms only and no cheques are sent with them.

Officials of the Department fully appreciate the trouble required in making out these forms, but are doing everything in their power to facilitate matters by reminding the public in plenty of time respecting the demands of the law.

The total collections under the Income Tax Act for last years are some millions of dollars ahead of the year before, in spite of a ten per cent reduction in the tax. Mr. Euler attributes this increased collection to three things:

1. More efficient methods of collection.
2. The increased prosperity of the country.
3. ADVERTISING

CHES. CONKLIN

IN "TAXI 13"

Outstanding among the big screen hits of the present season, according to the verdict of critics who have had the privilege of witnessing it elsewhere, is "Taxi 13" the FBO special in which the famed fun-maker, Chester Conklin has the featured role and which comes to the theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Under the masterful direction of Marshall Neilan the story of the sometimes thrilling and unusually uproarious adventures of Angus MacTavish nighthawk taxi driver who innocently involves himself with a gang of crooks is said to have been depicted upon the screen with the desirable blending of comedy, suspense, and heart interest written into it by the author W. Scott Darling himself a comedy director and supervisor of wide experience.

In the hilarious role of the hapless caddy, father of eleven children and whose mission in life is to scrape together the first payment on a new car, Chester Conklin is said to temper his familiar high-class comedy with touches of pathos and genuine dramatic feeling that go far toward making "Taxi 13" a popular success.

The supporting cast, headed by Gaiety Martin, Sigmund, and Lester, is said to be ideal in giving balance to Conklin's characterization of Andy Smith

HOUSEWIVES ASKED TO SELL THEIR RECIPES

One hundred recipes are required for a new recipe book which is going to be published by one of Canada's oldest manufacturers of pure food products.

The recipes required are those of simple, tasty and inexpensive dishes such as are used in the average Canadian home. To get one hundred of these recipes the firm in question is willing to pay five dollars each for the best fifty, and three dollars each for the next best fifty recipes sent in by housewives. There is only one condition to be complied with. Recipes must employ among their ingredients
one or more of the company's products. However, this condition presents no difficulties, for all the commodities manufactured by the company are used in general cooking, pastry making, bread baking, salads and candy. Recipes for any one of these are eligible. Arrangements have been made to have the recipes tested by expert Canadian dietitians. That our readers may have an opportunity to obtain cash for their recipes they should send these in at once to The Canada Starch Company, Limited,
Montreal, P.Q.

Nome Hero, Derby Winner

Leonhard Sepala, hero of the famous race to Nome, is congratulated on winning the Seventh Eastern International Dog Sled Derby at Quebec. He covered 123 miles in eleven hours, six and a half minutes with his sturdy team of Siberian huskies.

Dog sled derby records were broken and new ones established during the three days of the race. Dupuis, who finished second, made a world's record when he completed the first lap of 41 miles in 3 hours, 22 minutes, 42 seconds. Of the nine who finished the three laps, only two took as long as the first Derby winner at Quebec in 1923, demonstrating that harder and speedier dogs have been developed for sled work since then.

Including my debt that makes $10.00 coming to you, and no one paying, each one of your debtors saying: "Why it's only $2.00 what's the hurry?"—but when the $2.00 is multiplied 5 times it's $10, and when it's multiplied by hundreds it's a lot of money!"

By Dr. ARTHUR L. FORSTER

In common with most infectious and contagious diseases typhoid fever is slowly but certainly becoming obsolete. The time will come when it will be unknown.

Reasons for Disappearance of Typhoid

The principal reason for the decline of typhoid is sanitation. Purification of the water supply proper disposal of sewage pasteurization of milk have contributed more than anything else to its reduced incidence. There is today absolutely no excuse for any municipality to have more than a negligible number of typhoid fever cases at any time throughout the year.

There's peace in the household guarded by Castoria. Peaceful sleep for Baby. Uninterrupted rest for Mother. For a few drops of pure Castoria will quiet any fretful infant. Or put the little one back to sleep when there's an upset stomach.

Parents, don't try to do without good Castoria! It isn't fair to the baby, and it makes things hard for you. You can't give Baby medicine meant for grown-ups—or should! Castoria is the solution. It is always safe. It always does the work. And although it acts as swiftly as an opiate or a narcotic, it contains neither. Castoria is purely vegetable. Give it whenever there's constipation, colic, diarrhea.

No less than five million modern mothers have come to depend on Castoria, for twenty-five million bottles were bought last year! Get yours today! Don't wait for some night when it's needed, and the drugstore is closed!

Another factor that has contributed not a little to the wiping out of typhoid is this: the typhoid bacilli are themselves gradually losing their virulence because of the lack of fresh soil. In this connection restriction of immigration doubtless plays a part. If these same bacilli were transplanted into a part of the world in which typhoid had never been known it would probably decimate the population.

Which brings to us the third reason for the decline of typhoid namely immunity. There is no question that the people of civilized communities have gradually acquired a tolerance toward the disease. Contacts often repeated confer a natural immunity. Just as this holds true of the individual so it is applicable to the entire race.

What Vaccination Has Done

While vaccination is not to be regarded as an absolute preventive of typhoid fever is, given case it does possess unquestioned virtue. Nowhere is this more strikingly illustrated than in the typhoid statistics of the World War and the Spanish American War. It has become a trite statement that typhoid fever destroyed more soldiers during the latter war than were killed by the enemy's guns. In Cuba and on the way to the island 14 per cent of the American troops had typhoid fever. At that time vaccination against typhoid was unknown.

During the World War all the American soldiers were vaccinated against the disease—over 1,500,000 soldiers being treated. That this immunization progress had some effect is evidenced by the fact that only 0.37 per cent of our men had typhoid during the World War. In other words there were about 40 cases of typhoid during the Spanish American war to 1 case during the World War.

Prevention of Typhoid

It may be stated that the civilization of any community is proportioned to its typhoid rate. In Chicago there was a time when a goodly percentage of physicians' income was derived from his typhoid cases. To-day he is about as likely to encounter a case of typhoid as of leprosy. Which is one way of saying that in this city typhoid has been practically wiped out. The same is true of all progressive communities. In fact, most of the typhoid cases that one encounters are "imported." People spending their vacations at resorts where the milk and water supply and sewage disposal are not supervised but home a colony of typhoid bacilli with the other souvenirs of their trip.

If a community is so small that it cannot afford a sewage system it can at least have its local physician vaccinate the people. The Mayor's cabinet of every town should have its commissioner of health as well as its chief of police. Probably the doctor like most of his kind is so accustomed to working for nothing that he will be able to save the community enough to discount about ten times over the added taxation levied for this appropriation.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Bath Itch

J. W. B. writes: Can you tell me what is the reason for the itching of the body that I experienced after bathing. This is always worse in cold weather. I have tried everything I know for it without relief and would give a great deal to be rid of it. My rest is sometimes so much disturbed that I am half awake during the day-time from loss of sleep during the night before.

Reply

You have a skin whose horny layer (the outer protective covering) is thin and rather poorly supplied with grease glands. When you bathe you wash off this horny layer especially if you use an alkaline soap which dissolves the oil in the skin. This leaves the delicate nerve endings in the skin without any insulation and they are irritated by the air giving rise to a sensation which we know as itching. I would suggest that you cover your self with a liberal amount of a neutral fat like lanolin after bathing. Or if this ineffective use cold cream for cleansing purposes instead of water. All so use a neutral soap like Castile.

What to eat?—is a question often asked by the housewife. As a rule men and older children are not hungry about what they eat as long as plenty of something which smells good and looks palatable is put before them. But the wise housewife will not be satisfied with the ease with which her family may be satisfied. She will consider the nourishing qualities of the food which she sets before them.

One may eat and still be virtually starved you know. That is, one may eat the stomach will feed that lacks the necessary elements for nourishment and while the appetite may be satisfied the body cells will get no nourishment. The results are poor health and poor body protection against disease. This malnutrition is the cause of the spread of contagious diseases because the body of the undernourished has poor resistance to sickness.

This may be avoided by giving the family reasonable food in the right quantity and not of the right quality. For example, new home grown cabbage has most of the vitamins necessary for good nourishment. It is good roughage and with corned beef new peas and pickled new beets makes a delicious meal. For dessert fresh fruit is ideal because fruits contain vitamins and essential minerals.

It is just as easy and just as cheap to give the family the right food as the wrong and the resulting health appetite and happiness of the members are really worth while.

CLEANING GRAIN

(Experimental Farms Note)

The cleaning of seed grain should be one of the most important operations on the farm, and the farmer who retains clean land and produces clean grain year after year must follow the practice of thoroughly cleaning his seed grain.

The machinery necessary for cleaning and the way of doing this work must be governed by the weed seeds and other impurities to be removed. Impurities such as broken straw chaff and weed seeds which differ markedly in size and shape from the grain being cleaned can be readily cleaned out by most fanning mills properly operated. The weed seeds which are the main difficulty and where such separations are to be made special machines are necessary and in special cases as separating with oats from the oats, the only thorough method of cleaning is by hand picking.

The cleaning out of inert matter and weed seeds of widely different size from the grain need not be discussed extensively in this article as nearly any make of general purpose cleaner properly operated will do good work in such cases. Care must be taken to operate at the right speed and to feed within its capacity as when the sieves are overloaded no machine can do good work.

The cleaning of grain where the impurities are similar in shape presents greater difficulty and in many cases special cleaners are required to do a good job. In any district where a central cleaning plant is available the farmer is advised to have his grain cleaned at such a plant as he has the reason for the itching of the body that I experienced after bathing. This is always worse in cold weather. I have tried everything I know for it without relief and would give a great deal to be rid of it. My rest is sometimes so much disturbed that I am half awake during the day-time from loss of sleep during the night before.

To determine whether the machine is doing the work you wish, spread out a quantity of the cleaned seed on a table where weed seeds can be more readily seen. A sample may also be sent to a seed laboratory where an analysis of the impurities will be made.

All seed should be cleaned before sowing and cleaning should be done early enough in the spring so that the work does not have to be hurried.

How to Play BRIDGE

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

ARTICLE No. 13

Good deductive bidding is very rare, not only because it is not an easy proposition but also because the opportunities seldom arise. Here is a hand in which the dealer had his opportunity and took advantage of it:

This is the problem Z had to solve and the correct solution depended on proper deductions from the bidding:

No score, rubber game. Z bid one diamond. A passed. Y bid one spade and B passed. Z now bid two trumps. A passed. Y bid three no trump and B passed. How should Z and Y bid their hands from now on so that they can arrive at a little slam by sound bidding? Think this over and compare your opinion with the analysis that will be given in the next article.

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y win all the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the trick of hearts and trump in Y's hand with the trick of spades. Y should now lead the nine of spades. B must discard. He cannot discard a heart or Z, with two trumps, can establish his hearts. B must, therefore, discard either a club or a diamond. It is really immaterial for no matter which of these two suits B discards Z will discard the same suit as he discards in either case.

As A has more strength in diamonds than in clubs, suppose B, at trick two, discards the five of diamonds. Z should then discard the five of diamonds. A should discard the nine of diamonds. If B had discarded a club at trick two, Z should have discarded the four of clubs.

At trick three Y should lead the suit B discarded, which we have assumed to be diamonds. Z wins this trick with the king of diamonds. Z should then lead his ace of hearts. A is forced to discard. His best discard is the jack of diamonds. Y should discard the five of clubs. Z should then lead the seven of hearts. A should discard the jack of clubs and Y should trump with the six of spades.

Y should now lead the seven of spades, his last trump. A is forced to discard. He cannot discard the queen of hearts or Z's ten of hearts will be good. He is thus forced to discard the seven of clubs. Z should discard the ten of hearts. A is now forced to discard. If he discards his last diamond, Y's seven of diamonds is good. If he discards the queen of clubs, both of Z's clubs are good. It is apparent, therefore, that irrespective of the card A elects to discard at the sixth trick, Y must win the balance of the tricks. It is a clever little problem and full of pitfalls for the unwary. After you have mastered this solution, try out the variation, discarding the seven of clubs from B's hand at trick two, instead of the trick of diamonds.

In morning coat and crev trousers very obsequious and discreet. What had become of the faithful Bolland? Another paper was an account in my own handwriting of some expense or other amounting to about ninety pounds while my cheque book showed that I had been spending a considerable sum of money of late with some furnishing firm in Paris.

Was it possible that I had set up an apartment for my unknown wife, Ilona?

I subjected every object I possessed to the most careful scrutiny. Most things I had never set eyes on before. Yet the memoranda I had were written in a firm handwriting, evidently my own.

My brain was indeed in a whirl.

I felt myself going mad. Therefore I put on my clothes again with a light coat over them and descending went out into the silent deserted street past the great fountain the waters of which awakened the echoes until I found myself at last in that long straight street one of the greatest thoroughfares in the world the famous Corso.

I detected it in the pale grey light of the morning. The big electric lights were still flaming and as I passed a silent policeman he politely wished me buon giorno.

I wandered past the Hotel Russie, and higher up the hill Home lay at my feet. It was growing lighter every moment—a pearly grey light tinged with rose-pink. At last after my wanderings I stood—as one day in my long past youth—upon the site of the ancient Torre Maecensis in the beautiful garden of the Palazzo Colonna and looked around on the extensive view of the towers and cupolas the palaces and monuments which on the seven hills are modern Rome.

Suddenly I recollected that my father had taken me to that spot when I was about eighteen to see Rome at dawn.

Again I stood there to wonder and to think. Below me bathed in the pale gold of the rising sun lay the red roofs of the Eternal City, picturesque mysterious the capital of a kingdom it was a city which from half a century consequent on war led my an ex-revolutionary had risen into grandeur and prosperity to a powerful place in Europe. I gazed on the wonderful dome of St Peter's and beside it the colossal tower of Saint Angelo (with the winding Tiber and its bridges—Rome—the changeless city since the Christian era).

In my state of mind these thoughts ran through my bewildered brain. Why I know not.

If I had forsaken Joan Gell what had occurred? I realized that with my father's fierce hatred of her father it had been impossible to openly declare my love. We had both agreed on this and our actions until that fatal night in Camberwell had been the same of discretion. Yet I had indisputable evidence that I had married some body named Ilona; and further my cheque books showed heavy payments to form a home for the latter.

The one part however which gripped my brain and dulled my senses was my admiration for the girl Angela. I knew that we had met before and further I was conscious that she held me as clay in her hands. Her beauty was in my eyes diabolical her laugh that of a Bacchante and yet she was entirely irresistible. She was drawing me towards her as surely as a magnet draws a needle.

And I had promised to meet her at the State ball at the Quirinale that night.

I tried to resist; but poor fool that I was it was useless. Perhaps I would be forgiven on account of the unstable condition of my disordered brain.

It was seven o'clock in the morning before I returned to my bedroom at the Excelsior. Without taking off my evening clothes I sank upon the bed to sleep tired and worn with my brain wrapped still in cotton wool.

At eleven I was awakened by the telephone ringing; and I answered

it. I heard Lord Kingscliff's voice. "Is that you Hipwell?" he asked. And I replied to the affirmative he said "I thought I'd let you know that you'll have to leave for London tomorrow night. Sorry Lionel but you know in the service we are not our own masters."

"Quite all right," I replied wondering why his voice seemed so sympathetic and apologetic.

"I shall see you at the Quirinale to night Addio! His Excellency said."

And I hung up the receiver. So my visit to Rome was to be cut short. Perhaps after all it was better so.

CHAPTER VIII

The Double Nought

I spent the day wandering about the board handsome street of Rome—Rome under Mussolini. I noted where cobbled piazzas had been bare and curty there were now bright flower beds shady trees and often refreshment fountains. Around me on every side arose great palatial buildings worthy of the proudest city in the world.

I watched the tourists feeding the pigeons and took several aperitifs at the popular cafes.

The idea of the State ball for which I had already received a card from the Minister of the Royal Household nauseated me. I was in no mood for brilliant throngs. Court etiquette or dancing was not my forte. Yet the Little Countess attracted me I felt absolutely certain that we had once been friends but to what extent or in what circumstances I was in entire ignorance. My memory concerning her was also a complete blank.

At ten o'clock that night I put on my uniform and taking my cocked hat and gloves drove to the Palace where I passed across the red carpet and along the great brilliantly-lit corridor lined by the Royal servants and the Guards in their brilliant uniforms. With me entered several foreign diplomats with their ladies including Grant the secretary of the United States Embassy whom I recognized as an old friend I had known in Paris.

Assembled in the great salon with five hundred others we awaited the coming of our Majesties. I gazed eagerly around to discover the Contessina but was sorely disappointed she was not present! And yet she herself had pressed me to come and dance with her.

Of a sudden there came the three resounding bangs upon the great gilt double doors. The Marshal of the Court an aged Duke with snow white hair and heavy moustache threw them open and the King in full dress uniform of a General walking with the Queen whose diamonds flashed with a thousand fires entered smiling at the bowing and curtsying assembly. Their Majesties accompanied by the Prince of Savoy and other members of the Italian Royal family made a slow tour of the great gilt chamber with its hundred crystal chandeliers and then after they had ascended their dais the dance commenced.
